DISCOVERY OF ALBER BELEW. for Gold Was Washed.

Hughes is one of the two sur or of the little party of six that dissecred the famous Afrier Guich in Madison ments, that autob which has readment more placer gold than any other placer diggings the same size in the world, says the many thousands of dollars of the shining from the black sands of the Rocky tain ravines, his earthly possessions oday consist of a humble log cabin on the d swept side of the mountains sur-nding the Big Hole basin, two horses respector's outfit. Ve went up Squaw Guleh and down the fivide of Alder gulch to a point about mile above where Virginia City now stands and made camp about 6 o'clock in the even-ing, said Mr. Hughes, aged 24 and 25 years, a pack saddle and a

Our grub stake was almost gone, only about two pounds of flour, one pound of bacon and a little coffee remaining. We unpacked, turned the horses loose, and I began getting supper. The horses strayed down the gulch a short distance and Bill Fairweather went after them. When he returned he asked how soon he could get returned he asked how soon he could get the pan in which I was mixing the dough for our evening meal; that there was a bar down the gulch from which he would like to try a pan of dirt. The Indians had taken nearly everything we formerly had, and this pan was the only one remaining. I dumped the dough out into a flour sack and gave Bill the pan. He went down to bar, scooped up a pan of dirt, leaves and grass and washed it out in the stream near by. The result obtained from this first pan of dirt washed in Alder Gulch was 32 cents in gold.

first pan of dirt washed in Alder Gulch was 32 cents in gold.

"The next day Henry Edgar killed an antelope, which gave us grub stake sufficient to keep us two days. We spent the time in prospecting down Alder Gulch. The second day in the gulch, on this bar referred to, by the time we had worked an hour and a half, we had dug a hole about two and one-half feet deep and were getting from $4 to $5 in gold to the pan. The extent of our prospecting during the two days was from a quarter of a mile above camp down to where Virginia City now stands. You see we wanted to see as near as possil be how far down the pay dirt reached before we left for Bannack to get another grub stake. The third day we pulled stakes and started for Bannack with about three ounces of gold.

and started for Bannack with about three ounces of gold.

"We crossed the Beaverhead River a mile below where Dillon stands and reached Bannack near the first of June. About two weeks later we left Bannack for Alder Gulch with about three hundred other prospectors. When we reached the Point of Rocks below Dillon we called a halt to have it determined what size claims the others were going to allow us six fellows to stake out. Col. McClain, who was the first Delegate from Montana to Washington, and Wash Stapleton, now a lawyer in Butte, presided over this meeting. The decision was that we were entitled to no more than any of the others.

"We had told no man where the gulch was, and when they made their decision we told them that we would not go an inch further. We packed up and started in the constitution telling the men that the opposite direction, telling the men that we were going to Walla Walla. When we had proceeded about a mile a courier was after us and informed us that we could any size claim we desired. We reted and all proceeded toward Alder. Camp was pitched that evening near Ram's Horn Gulch, which rups into the Ruby valley.

"We arranged with about ten of the crowd, without the others knowing it, to meet us at a cotton wood tree up the valley at 0 o'clock that night and we would go into Alder Gulch ahead of the others and we six would stake out our claims before the crowd got there. The men were prompt, and we all reached Alder Gulch about daylight next morning. When the crowd missed us next morning they went wild and scattered in all directions, and it was three days before they all finally gathered in the Alder Gulch, but when they all finally reached it they found more than enough land for all.

"We six hired eight men, at $7 per day and their board, to help us construct a small dam and run a ditch so that we could get water on our bar. It took nearly a week, and then in the few hours that we had to placer mine before the week was up we washed out enough gold to pay the men off and had $277 left. The best work I ever saw done in Alder Gulch was near Virginia City, when two men struck a streak of dirt which yielded them from $1,500 to $2,500 per day for several days Ere winter set in there were more than 1,000 men in the gulch, and it was estimated that $30,000,000 in gold had been washed out.

"What became of your party of six and walley.
"We arranged with about ten of the

that $30,000,000 in gold had been washed out.

"What became of your party of six and what did you make out of it," was asked.

"Henry Edgar, I think, took out about $45,000," Barney replied. "He and myself are the only survivors. He lives down near Clark's Fork of the Columbia, in Missoula county. He lost his stake in the butchering business. Tom Cober took out about $50,000 and bought an orange grove in California. I understand he was killed by a brother of Boone Helm. Sweeney and Rogers each made a stake of near $50,000 and went back to New Brunswick, their native land, where they died. Bill Fairweather also made a stake of more than $40,000, which I have heard that he squandered. He was a heavy drinker and worse to himself than any one else. He died in the Ruby Valley, was buried near Ram's Horn Gulch, and later his body was removed to Virginia City, so I understand.

"And myself? well, partuer. I don't like

*And myself? well, partner, I don't like to say, but as you insist, will say that my stake amounted to near $40,000. I buried $24,000 on the bank of the Beaverhead River, took $12,000 and went to British Columbia for a new months, returned, dug up the $24,000, went to San Francisco and invested it in real estate, the title to which proved to be no good and I lost the whole thing. My real estate was located right in what is now the centre of San Francisco and is to-day probably worth several million dollars. In 1868 I returned to Alder Guich without a penny."

Concert for a Masonic Fund.

Mme. Lillian Blauvelt will be the principal singer at a great concert in Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 29, under the auspices of St. Cecile Lodge No. 568, F. and A. M., in aid of the maintenance fund for A. M., in aid of the maintenance fund for the Masonic Sanatorium for Consumptives. An orchestra of 125 picked musicians will be conducted by Walter Damrosch, John Philip Sousa, Victor Herbert and Nahan Franko, and a chorus of 300 voices will be led in Handel's "Hallelujah" chorus by Walter Henry Hall. Paintings of Unusual Merit

That We Have Been Compelled to Reduce IT IS SIMPLY A QUESTION OF ROOM in the Art Galleries. Most Brooklyn people know how crowded they are now with Paintings and other Pictures of merit and still many new Oil Paintings are to come. We must make room promptly and so Pictures which have been here for some time are sharply reduced in price.

The prices were low at the start—Loeser prices are famously fair. And the Paintings may well satisfy your fondness for good Pictures as well as anything among the newer arrivals. But something must give way very promptly and it is only right that these should go.

They are all artistically framed in gold—right framing is one of the features of the Art Gallery. Here is a list, not of all the Paintings, but fairly showing their great values. A Day in June, Charles A. Burlingame
